Science: ME my five senses

We put our five senses to the test during some scientific investigations. We learnt that the different parts of our bodies send messages to our brain about what we are seeing, feeling, tasting, smelling and hearing. While blindfolded we had to listen and identify which animal noises we could hear. We used our hands to feel objects in bags and decided what they were. We tasted sweet, salty, sour and plain water which was mostly disgusting! Four pots were filled with different familiar smells and we had to use our noses and sense of smell to record what they were (curry, chocolate, coffee & garlic!). We used our eyes to spot numbers, pictures and letters in some optical colour tests.

Yuck!
